Category:Microprocessors Category:Digital signal processors Category:Graphics chips[Evaluation of the caudal sub-epithelial connective tissue of the ureter and of some ureteral injuries]. 34 human ureters have been studied with the electron microscope. The epi-thelium was shown to constitute a closed capsule of an elastic connective tissue, which is bonded to the ureteral muscle and to the surrounding muscularis propria. A well developed caudal sub-epithelial lamina propria exists, containing loosely and compactly arranged connective tissue cells and the blood capillaries. The source of inflammatory processes is most frequently a caudal ureteral injury, leading to ureteral stenosis, sometimes complicated with hydronephrosis and perirenal abscesses. For a better understanding of the different etiology and pathogenesis of the different ureteral lesions, it is suggested that the healing processes of the injured ureters should be further investigated in animal experiments. 818 S.W.2d 622 (1991) STATE of Tennessee, Appellee, v.
